Major Information

The Women's Studies major is a comprehensive program incorporating disciplines and registered programs from all the schools at St. Bonaventure University. The curriculum instructs women and men in a life of courage, one of learning supported by the development of critical minds and a disposition to serve the larger community.

Fundamentally, we hope to continue to guide our students toward seeing the world through the prism of gendered power.

Would you like to:

- Learn about Women's Studies and the complexity of women's experience?
- Learn the history and current situation of women in society's power structures?
- Discover female perspectives, philosophies and religious experiences?
- Find out how to use gender as a category of analysis?
- Pursue a topic of your choice that integrates Women's Studies into your own life?

Did you answer YES to any of the above? Then choose Women's Studies, a major that can take you wherever you want to go. Women's Studies students are equipped to excel in any of the areas that are open to liberal arts or humanities majors.

While our graduates are encouraged to pursue graduate degrees in Women's Studies, many choose other paths, often ones of service to the community. From social work to law, Women's Studies majors do it all! Join St. Bonaventure's Women's Studies major – the first and only one offered by a Catholic undergraduate school in Western New York.

Why Women's Studies?

Women's Studies involves a wide range of perspectives. Students who take Women's Studies tend to do so for one of two reasons. The first is that they find a female perspective available in our course that is not readily found in others. Our students want to know the side of a story that is at most only hinted at in other courses.

They find it with us, and often express their surprise that more of the female side of the story is not more generally known. So our students are, simply put, curious to know more.

The other reason students tell us they take our courses is that they want more varied coursework than in traditional majors. Because Women's Studies is interdisciplinary, students are encouraged to take courses that center on women, but do so from a wide variety of perspectives.

Students can take a business, journalism, literature or sport course and find those all within our program. It broadens their understanding even while they simultaneously remain focused on one issue: women.

In summary, Women's Studies offers a different approach for some of our more inquisitive students.
